WELLS RIVER.

The Popularity of Hale's Tavern.

On June 8, 1904, Jerome F. Hale completed nine years' service as landlord of the hotel that bears his name. During that time he has entertained 78,558 guests, a remarkable record when one considers that Wells River is a small village of about 700 people. Since last June there have been over 2000 guests registered, and a glance at the hotel register will show that on each page an average of six different states is represented by the guests. In the ninth year which ended last June Mr. Hale entertained 8225 guests—an average of 23 for every day in the year. It is doubtful if any hotel in New England, located in a village the size of this one, can show a better record and there is certainly few hotels in New England that have a better reputation for entertaining their guests.
